The canning of Salmon on the Sacramento river has been a practical failure title season. Perhaps some of the deficiency may be overcome by the fail run, but this is hardly possible. The run last year was very light, and it is smaller that year to date. It is said that the built of the supply has been desiroyed by the seals and catifals. The run on the Rogue river is fair, and one consignment of 1,000 cases has been shipped abroad. Advices from the Columbia river report the boats averaging from ten to twelve fish per day.
